If I am in a geographic area in which fall is glorious, I introduce the haiku in the fall. Haiku is one of the poetry forms I introduce to my junior high students, but it is not one of the first poetry forms I introduce. by Matsuo Basho (1644-1694) A giant firefly: that way, this way, that way, this -- and it passes by. As a teacher, first explain the haiku's rigid structural format of five syllables in the first line, seven in the second, and five in the third. A haiku is about serenity and peace. Establish a mood. Haiku, dating back to 17th century Japan, are brief, 3-line poems that follow a strict syllabic pattern. There are some wonderful Japanese haiku available, several of which I have included at the end of this article. It is like a melody softly it whispers to me by Samantha Keim A small green oval Falling free and gracefully Through the dark blue skies Never seeing the tall tree It once lived peacefully on by Jeanne Jord The tears of a girl With a crushed and broken heart Hidden from her friends by Jeanne Jordan "Sleep" Completely motionless Discovering strange worlds Where no one bothers you by Aaron Ryan A soft gentle touch Only a woman could give To the man she loves by Samantha Keim Feelings flow freely Stress is gone, I can relax I find inner peace by Melissa McDowel Article by Glori Chaika Copyright© 1998, 2015 Education World® If you are looking to teach a poetry unit to your upper elementary students then you have come to the right place. by Kijo Murakami (1865-1938) For love and for hate I swat a fly and offer it to an ant. In a haiku one may depict a drop of water on a leaf reflecting early morning light, the answer of one bird to another's call, the persistence of a flower pushing its way through the cracks in the pavement to touch the sky. Haiku can be a way through which children can express their inner souls, a window through which one can see a child's world. Good poetry, like good prose, is efficient, but the beauty of poetry is that it is extremely efficient. With so few syllables, each word in the poem is meaningful. by Issa (1762-1826) First autumn morning: the mirror I stare into shows my father's face. Students can then recopy their poetry and illustrate it, decorating the room with their images of beauty. The haiku is a very structured poetry form. Your fourth grade, fifth grade and even middle school students will learn how to write seven different types of poems in this unit! The poems are: Free Verse, Cinquain, Haiku, Tanka, Sparkling Diamond, Bie Poem, and Limerick! Here is what you will get: A colorful 4-page document that contains seven different types of poetry in a task card format: Free Verse, Cinquain, Haiku, Tanka, DiaPage 2 In order to continue enjoying our site, we ask that you confirm your identity as a human. by Samantha Keim Outside the rain pours Tapping against the window Do you hear the sound? Poetry can be a way through which children can express their inner souls, a window through which one can see a child's world. Initially introduced by the Japanese, they are three-lined poems containing five syllables in the first line, seven in the second, and five in the third. Read several to the class. I usually wait to introduce the haiku. Haiku is a poetry form that needs beauty to become a thing of beauty. If I am in an area in which spring is an exceptional season, a time bursting with fragrance and hope, I introduce the haiku in spring. Haiku poets often focus on simple subjects, but choose their words very carefully. Do not break the mood until poetry is produced. Looking for a simple yet unique writing activity for your child on Valentine's Day? Containing just seventeen syllables, the haiku cannot capture a "big picture." One depicts in them tiny images of incredible beauty, something glorious that might be missed if the writer had not taken the time to point it out. Students who have written a haiku might try a senryu, poems with the same format as haiku but about any topic, or a tanka, a five-lined poem about nature with syllables per line of five, seven, five, seven, seven. Thank you very much for your cooperation. Try writing poetry in the form of a valentine haiku? Fallen sick on a journey In dreams I run wildly Over a withered moor by Matsuo Basho (1644-1694) The first snow! Enough to bend the leaves Of the jonquil low. This type of poetry is like a walk in the park. It is getting in touch with nature; it feels like a walk in the woods. I introduce it when my students' world is most beautiful. To do so, use visual imagery and/or music or pictures of pastoral scenes, and when the students seem to have some glorious scene in their mind's eye, challenge them to record it -- in seventeen syllables. Poetry can be the essence of what one is trying to say; without the adjectives or the extra articles, it is the core of what one means. It is perfect for those break-away days when the world is too beautiful to do anything else but write poetry.
